1 Introduction

The East Anglian Plain Natural Area is the largest of all the Natural Areas in England, occupying more than half the area of East Anglia. It stretches from Fakenham in the north through mid and south Norfolk, central Suffolk as far west as Bury St Edmunds and into south Essex encompassing Chelmsford and Harlow. A small proportion of the Natural Area lies in Hertfordshire, between Bishop's Stortford and Stevenage and an even smaller part lies in east Cambridgeshire. The East Anglian Plain Natural Area is composed of three Countryside Character Areas, the South Suffolk and North Essex Claylands, the South Norfolk and High Suffolk Claylands and Mid Norfolk.

The East Anglian Plain is characterised by intensive arable farming which has had a marked effect on both the landscape and the wildlife of the area. The loss of semi-natural habitats such as hedges and ponds, particularly in High Suffolk has resulted in a largely open and featureless landscape. A small proportion of the East Anglian Plain however, is occupied by habitats which are of high wildlife value and a priority for conservation. These special habitats include ancient woods, species-rich grassland, fens, parkland, bat caves and landform/geological sites.

1.1 Special habitats in the East Anglian Plain

The East Anglian Plain is noted for its ancient woods which support a number of Biodiversity Action Plan species (HMSO, 1995), such as dormouse and stag beetle. Remnants of ancient woodland are found particularly in the South Suffolk and North Essex Claylands Character Area. Parks and pasture woodlands are also a feature of the Natural Area. Species of international importance which occur in parkland include stag beetle and bats. Fens are a key habitat in the UK Biodiversity Action Plan. Two groups of internationally important valley fens which occur in the Natural Area have been proposed as Special Areas of Conservation (SACs). In addition to its important fen sites, the East Anglian Plain is known to support a valuable resource of species-rich grassland. Lowland species-rich grassland is one of the most threatened habitats in the UK. Traditionally managed hay meadows and pastures of high conservation value occur as isolated fragments throughout the East Anglian Plain. In addition, large bat hibernacula are also a notable feature of the Plain. All species of bat are protected by legislation and the pipistrelle bat is a key Biodiversity Action Plan species. Finally, there are a significant number of internationally and nationally important geological sites which are found within the Natural Area.

A detailed description of the East Anglian Plain, the special habitat features and the priorities for conservation are presented in a recently published profile (English Nature, 1997).

2 Aims

The aims of the project are to collate and summarise data on each key conservation feature in the East Anglian Plain:

- valley fens
- hay meadows and other species-rich grassland
- ancient woods
- parkland, pasture woodlands and ancient trees
- bat caves or other hibernacula
- landform and geology

At present, survey data is held at a number of different organisations within the Natural Area e.g. the Wildlife Trusts, English Nature, County recorders. The report aims to provide a summary of all data which is available, in order to assess the current extent and quality of the conservation resource. The report also aims to identify areas where survey information is incomplete or lacking. This information will be valuable to a number of different organisations when considering priorities for future surveys in the Natural Area. The report will also provide valuable base-line data to monitor whether the objectives for nature conservation, as identified in the East Anglian Profile, are met in the future.

3 Methodology

3.1 Data Collation

The data for each site supporting a special habitat within the Natural Area, were gathered by the appropriate Wildlife Trust i.e. Hertfordshire, Cambridgeshire, Essex, Norfolk and Suffolk, under the direction of the Suffolk Wildlife Trust. The data were then sent to the Suffolk Wildlife Trust for collation and analysis.

The collated data, which includes site details and National Vegetation Classification (NVC) communities are given in Tables 1-6.

3.2 Sources of Data

3.2.1 Sites of Special Scientific Interest (SSSIs)

A list of SSSIs located within the East Anglian Plain was obtained from the offices of English Nature. SSSIs which contain special habitats or features as identified in the East Anglian Profile were listed. Details of the location and area of each SSSI, together with any details of NVC surveys were obtained from:

- Whole Site Objective statements
- Site citations
- ecological reports e.g. Norfolk Valley Fen survey (Smart, S 1992)
- Survey of Norfolk Grassland Sites (Moore, L. 1990 unpublished)
- management plans for Wildlife Trust SSSI reserves

3.2.2 County Wildlife Sites (CWSs)

Details of County Wildlife Sites which support special habitats or features (with the exception of ancient woodland) in the East Anglian Plain were obtained from site citations stored in each County Wildlife Trust office. Details of NVC communities for some species-rich grassland CWSs in Suffolk were collated from a report produced by the Suffolk Wildlife Trust (SWT, 1996). Details of NVC communities recorded in a proportion of Norfolk CWSs were extracted from the Norfolk Grassland Survey (NCC, 1990).

The extent of ancient woodland in the Natural Area was obtained from the Ancient Woodland Inventory (NCC, 1992).

Information about bat caves and other hibernacula was collected from the county bat recorders. County museums and Biological Record Centres were consulted for data on RIG sites.

4 Assessment of Data

4.1 Valley Fens

Two groups of internationally important valley fens i.e. the Norfolk valley fens and the Waveney-Little Ouse valley fens on the Norfolk/Suffolk border occur in the East Anglian Plain. These sites have been studied in considerable detail. NVC data is therefore available on all the SSSI fen sites. With the exception of three SSSIs, Redgrave and Lopham Fens, Pakenham Meadow and Kenninghall and Banham Fens, the areas of the NVC communities have not been calculated.

NVC data is also available for CWSs in Suffolk which support fen meadow communities. NVC communities on fen CWSs were identified using two quadrat samples per stand type, in contrast to the standard NVC methodology which recommends five samples per stand type. Information relating to CWSs therefore may be less accurate than data relating to SSSIs.

NVC surveys have not been carried out on the remaining CWS fens in the Natural Area with the exception of one CWS in Essex which has provisional NVC data. In the absence of NVC data, a number of wetland sites have been categorised in the fen habitat on the basis of Phase 1/Phase 2 survey information. It is likely that with more detailed survey data, some of these sites would be reclassified as species-rich grassland rather than fen.

Tables 1a and 1b present the individual site information for valley fens and include the following

- the name, location and area of each fen site
- its character area
- areas of those NVC communities recorded on the site

4 sites have estimated data.

3 sites have areas of NVC communities calculated.

iii. Number and proportion of CWSs with NVC information

5 sites, 15% of the total number (32) of fen CWSs have NVC information.

2 sites have calculated areas of NVC communities.

4.2 Species-rich Grassland

Species-rich grassland SSSIs have been surveyed in detail and NVC information is available on a sites. The areas of each NVC community on 11 SSSIs (38% of the total) have been calculated. Areas of NVC communities on the remaining sites have not been calculated.

Data on species-rich grassland CWSs are more variable in terms of quality and quantity. A large proportion of the CWSs in Suffolk have been surveyed to identify NVC communities and the area of each community present have been calculated (SWT, 1995). It should be noted however that NVC communities recorded in species-rich grassland CWSs in Suffolk were determined using two quadrat samples per stand type instead of 5 quadrat samples as recommended in the NVC methodology. This may have led to some inaccuracies in recording. Small CWSs in Suffolk e.g churchyards and road verges have not been surveyed to NVC standard.

The Norfolk Wildlife Trust is at present, in the final stages of identifying and describing CWSs. The standard of survey information for grassland CWSs in Norfolk is variable. Detailed surveys to Phase 2 standard have been carried out on many Norfolk grassland sites in 1995 and 1996, although NVC information was not recorded. However, a number of NVC surveys were carried out in 1990 as part of the Norfolk Grassland Survey (NCC, 1990). In contrast, a small proportion of sites were last surveyed in 1985 and the data on these sites are sparse and unreliable.

NVC data on grassland sites in Essex have been taken from an analysis of meadow survey data collected in 1984-1986. The analysis has been carried out on sparse data which was collected by inexperienced surveyors. It is considered therefore that some of these data are inaccurate and out of date.

The Hertfordshire Wildlife Trust is also in the final stages of identifying the CWSs in the part of the county which falls within the East Anglian Plain. This data is not yet available.

Information about land use and management of a large number of species-rich grassland CWSs (123 sites covering 700.49 ha) particularly in Essex and Norfolk is also not available.

Tables 2a and 2b present the individual site information for species-rich grasslands and include the following:

- the name, location and area of each species-rich grassland site
- its character area
- areas of those NVC communities recorded on the site
- land use type: hay meadow, pasture, village green, common land, churchyard, road verge
- interfluvial and flood-plain grassland

4.3 Ancient Woodland

With the exception of 3 Suffolk Wildlife Trust woodland reserves which have been surveyed to NVC standard, the majority of NVC data on SSSI woodlands has been estimated. The woodland data is largely derived from Peterken stand types which have already been identified, or based on the knowledge of woodlands by English Nature staff. Areas of NVC communities have been calculated for two woodland sites i.e. Burgate Wood and part of the Barking Woods.

Table 3 presents the individual site information for ancient woodlands and includes the following

- the name, location and area of each ancient woodland SSSI
- its character area
- areas of those NVC communities recorded on the site

ii) Number and area of SSSIs with NVC information

NVC data is available on 53 (88%) of a total of 60 ancient woods covering a total area of 2036 ha.

iii) Number and area of SSSIs without NVC information

A total of 7 sites (12% of the total number) do not have NVC information.

iv) The extent of ancient woodland in the East Anglian Plain Natural Area

Total area of ancient woodland is 11,803 ha.

Area of semi-natural ancient woodland is 7370 ha (62.4% of the total area).

Area of planted ancient woodland is 2948 ha (25% of the total area).

Area of cleared ancient woodland is 1485 ha (12.6% of the total area).

4.4 Parkland, pasture woodland and ancient trees

Table 4 presents the individual site information for parklands and includes the following:

- the name, location and area of the parkland site
- its character area
- the known conservation interest

Table 4 can be summarised as follows:

i) Number and area of parkland sites

- A total of 18 sites covering 956.75 ha.

ii) Conservation interest

2 sites are known for their lichen flora and 2 sites are known for their invertebrate interest. The specific conservation interest of the remaining parkland sites is not known.

There is no information on the location of ancient trees.

4.6 Geological Sites

Table 6 presents the individual site information for geological SSSIs and includes the following:

- the name and location of each geological site
- the area of each geological site

There are a total of 16 geological sites covering an area of 92.9 ha. There are no designated RIG sites in the East Anglian Plain Natural Area.

5. Discussion

5.1 Information on Special Habitats in the East Anglian Plain which is lacking or incomplete

5.1.1 Valley Fens

- areas of NVC communities recorded in SSSIs
- NVC surveys of fen CWSs

5.1.2 Species-rich Grassland

- areas of NVC communities recorded in species-rich grassland SSSIs
- NVC surveys of a large proportion of CWSs
- land use information relating to CWSs
- CWSs in Hertfordshire

5.1.3 Ancient Woodland

- measured NVC communities and calculated areas

5.1.4 Parkland, Pasture Woodland and Ancient Trees

- conservation interest of parkland /pasture woodland
- information on location of ancient trees

5.1.5 Bat Caves and other Hibernacula

- details of bat caves designated as CWSs in counties other than Suffolk

5.1.6 Geological Sites

- RIG sites throughout the East Anglian Plain

5.2 Final Summary

The collation and summary of the data relating to special habitats in the East Anglian Plain Natural Area have shown that the extent and standard of survey information within the area is variable, ranging from detailed NVC surveys of some sites to a complete absence of data in some areas. SSSIs, with the exception of ancient woodland sites, have been considered a priority for surveys, including the collection of NVC information. Without a comprehensive estimation of the areas of recorded NVC communities however, it is not possible to calculate the extent of valuable species-rich grassland and fen meadow communities within the SSSIs.

Parkland/pasture woodland, bat sites and geological sites are under-surveyed throughout the Natural Area. In the past, specialist surveyors have largely concentrated their efforts on SSSIs. There are undoubtedly more important sites which have not been identified as CWSs due to the paucity of information on lesser known groups such as lichens and invertebrates.

Detailed information relating to CWSs is sparse and is restricted mainly to species-rich grassland in Suffolk and to a lesser extent in Norfolk. Data on CWSs in the south west corner of the Natural Area is not yet available but it is estimated that there are 218 ha of unimproved grassland in Hertfordshire which falls within the East Anglian Plain.

In the absence of comprehensive detailed data and without basic information about land use and condition of sites in some areas, it is difficult to obtain an overall picture of the extent and quality of the resource of special habitats in the Natural Area.
